

Mill plan hits high gear

TERRACE — Months of speculation has turned into intense activity with the news last week that approval in principle has been given to the Orenda Forest Products plan to build a pulp and paper mill south of Lakelse Lake.

Construction is conditional upon Orenda meeting a set of requirements laid down by the provincial government before construction starts on the $400 million project.

"We're at the permitting stage and that's the final stage," said Orenda vice president Frank Foster after the approval was given.

He expects construction to start this summer at the Dubose Industrial Site.

Orenda's mill will produce 173,000 tonnes of magazine-quality of paper a year using 183,000 cubic metres of pulpwood and 23,000 tonnes of kraft from other pulp mills.

That's a very high rate of value-added return compared to traditional mills.

It'll employ an estimated 140 people directly and provide other jobs in transportation and in related service sectors.

Orenda will use Finnish technology to grind wood into pulp as opposed to traditional kraft mills which use chemicals. The process uses hydrogen peroxide as a brightening agent and not chlorine.

The facility is being billed by Orenda as North America's first zero liquid effluent mill because it'll recycle waste water.

Orenda has to participate in a monitoring committee of local and government representatives, conduct further environmental studies and take part in a socio-economic study to boost native economic benefits.

Foster welcomed the monitoring committee, saying it'll help Orenda explain the project to area residents.

He said some of the environmental studies, particularly one assessing the impact on the underground water the mill will use, are already underway.

Foster called the socio-economic study to determine native benefits precedent setter for the province.

"These are times of change in the province. There is a new government and it has new policies," he said.

That study will be financed by the provincial government and by Orenda. Terms of reference will be set within 30 days and it will be completed 90 days after that.

Orenda can begin site clearing when the terms of reference have been established and once it gets a permit of occupation for the Crown-owned land.

The study grew out of a native review of the project commissioned by the provincial government earlier this year.

The review confirmed government and Orenda studies that the mill can be built provided it meets stringent pollution control conditions.

This met what is called a fiduciary responsibility of the province to ask native groups for their opinions on developments that might affect them.

Although the native review delayed a government decision on the project and caused wor-

Busy brooms

THE MARATHON BEGINS. Local rinks hit the ice tonight to launch this year's Loggers Bonspiel. One of the premier curling events in the northwest, it has again attracted a full complement of 64 rinks who will vie for prizes in five events. Out-of-towners join the fray tomorrow night which also signals the beginning of round-the-clock curling. That means while A and B event contenders enjoy a relatively easy run to Sunday's finals, those relegated to D and E will be snatching sleep where they can — and not much of that Saturday night.

Not city's fault

TERRACE - Don't blame us!

That's the message council wants to get across to the local taxpayers before they receive their '92 tax notices.

Adopted by council Monday night, this year's $10.6 million city budget includes a 1.81 per cent increase in residential tax rates.

For the owner of a $65,000 home, it means the city is only looking for an extra $12.90 this year, or a total of $727.31.

However, mayor Jack Talstra pointed out, the hike will be much greater than that because the provincial government had abolished the supplementary homeowner's grant.

Last year, taxpayers were entitled to the basic homeowner's grant of $430 plus a supplementary grant to cover part of the difference between the basic grant and the taxes levied by the school district.

In the case of the $65,000 house, the school district taxes were $657 last year for a total of $1,348. But once the two grants were deducted, the homeowner's bottom line was only $861.47.

Now, that same taxpayer will face a bill for $946.96 - assuming the school district does not raise its taxes at all.

In other words, they will pay an extra $85 even though the city's bite has gone up less than $13. And the figures get worse the higher the assessed value of the home.

"We've held the line," Talstra emphasized, "We've been about as reasonable as we can be." Noting several departments would have less money to operate on than last year, he added, "We don't really know where we can cut anymore."

He said council would be lobbying Victoria to take relief action and suggested residents do the same.

Seniors' housing need proclaimed

TERRACE — Supportive housing is one of the greatest needs facing the older residents of this city, members of the provincial Seniors Advisory Council were told last week.

"Housing is a fundamental right in our society," said Aileen Frank, the local senior citizens counsellor.

"It's over 20 years since Terrace seniors received any housing consideration," Frank said, a reference to the length of time that had passed since the opening of Terraceview Lodge.

She told the council, here to listen to senior citizen opinions, that there is an immediate need for 20 supportive housing units.

Frank said supportive housing in particular would benefit three groups:

- those who could live in such a complex but were presently in Terraceview for lack of any other choice;

- spouses of lodge residents who wanted to be closer to "and help in the care of their love ones"; and

- people in the community who were "in need of attention physically and psychologically who could move closer to support facilities without having to move right into them."

Noting it was now five years since the supportive housing concept was first raised here, she asked, "What has happened to that proposal? Is it still on the back burner?"

Frank's view was echoed by Terrace Regional Health Care Society president Alex Houlden who knew couples who, while no longer able "to look after the old homestead", were not yet ready to move into long-term care facilities such as Terraceview.

Moving instead to a supportive housing complex adjacent to Terraceview would be the solution, he said. It would allow them to maintain their independence while at the same time providing them ready access to medical help if required, he added.

Houlden said there could also be a significant health care cost saving to be made because there were individuals living in Terraceview at the moment who would find a supportive housing complex quite adequate for their needs.

That would open up places at the lodge which would in turn allow at least some of the 11 long-term care patients currently residing in Mills Memorial hospital to move to Terraceview.

The saving would come because the patient cost-per-day figure at Mills was $540 compared to $113 at Terraceview. "It makes good business and moral sense," he added.

Thornhill fix years away

TERRACE — The marriage of Terrace and Thornhill or the possibility of creating a municipality in Thornhill is years away.

But the latest attempt at changes in local government is slowly moving forward.

"It's in the incubator," says regional district director Les Watmough.

The Greater Terrace Restructure Committee met for the first time last month and its members will meet again before summer to draw up terms of reference for a study by a consultant.

Terrace mayor Jack Talstra admitted the process is moving slowly, but added it can't be rushed. "I see it being two or three years before we get it settled," he said.

The people representing the area on the committee are Terrace aldermen Danny Sheridan and Darryl Laurent, Terrace residents David Lane and Dave McKeown, regional district directors Les Watmough and Sandy Sandhals, and unincorporated area residents Doug MacLeod and Donna Ziegler.

Watmough said the committee will appoint an independent chairman who isn't already on the committee.

He was responding to the regional district's call a week earlier for direct intervention by the municipal affairs ministry.

Directors passed a motion by Hazelton director Pete Weeber calling on Victoria to "expedite a form of self-government for Thornhill."

"Sometime in the future an amalgamation will have to happen," Watmough predicts. "It's a sensible thing. You reduce your costs. You don't duplicate councils. You don't duplicate administrations."

"Incorporation is of course an option. But over the long, long term it's the wrong option."

It's the third time local representatives have tried to solve the Thornhill problem, says Watmough, adding the last attempt was in the early 1980s.

City of Terrace administrator Bob Hallors said the committee has a grant of up to $40,000 from the municipal affairs ministry to carry out a restructuring study.

Officer faces assault charge

TERRACE — A Terrace RCMP officer has been charged with assault in connection with an incident here last December.

Const. George Lomax made a first appearance in provincial court April 3 charged with assaulting Stewart Cory Holland.

Inspector Larry Yeske said Lomax was working Dec. 21, 1991 at the time of the alleged incident. "It was an on-duty incident," he said.

Yeske wouldn't comment further on the case, and wouldn't say whether the officer will remain on regular duties while the charge is before the court.

The trial has been set for July 22 in Terrace provincial court.

Northwest Roundup

FORT FRASER — April 7 marked an historical birthday in this settlement between Fraser Lake and Vanderhoof.

It was the 78th anniversary of the driving in of the last spike of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

The railway opened the northern connection to the coast at Prince Rupert.

Grand Trunk merged in 1919 with several other railways to form the Canadian National Railway.

SMITHERS — Homeowners here face a 19 per cent increase in their property taxes.

That's because the supplementary homeowner grant was eliminated by the provincial government in the last budget.

HAZELTON — The Ken Trombley Arena here is getting a facelift worth nearly $600,000.

Included in the work are new dressing rooms and showers and a larger concession area. A sewer line has already been put in.

About one-third of the money comes from a provincial lottery grant.

BURNS LAKE — A three-year jail sentence has been given to a 17-year-old youth who robbed a gun store here in February.

A store employee suffered knife wounds to the neck during the robbery.

The youth, who can't be named because of his age, is prohibited from possessing firearms for 10 years following his release.

Natives want jobs from mill project

TERRACE — Orenda could face road blockades if it refuses to cut a deal with northwest natives, says the president of the Tsimshian Tribal Council.

Art Sterritt says the company will be in trouble if it doesn't give natives guarantees of jobs, training and other benefits.

"We'd go out there and block it," he said. "We'll do whatever we have to. They won't end up with any wood in there. They won't even end up with a mill there."

Negotiations are expected to take place in the weeks ahead between the company and the Tsimshian and Haisla of Kitimaat Village.

To get approval-in-principle, Orenda had to agree to be part of a socio-economic impact study aimed at finding ways to "maximize training, employment and other benefits" for natives.

But Sterritt said Orenda has given little sign so far that it will make concessions on the issue of native hiring.

"If they're as receptive as they've been up to now, it'll be a no go," he predicted. "Orenda is going to have to wake up to that. They're going to have to start working with us."

Kitimaat Village chief councillor Gerald Amos, however, is making no predictions about what will happen if there are difficulties at the bargaining table.

"The goodwill of the company is going to determine how cooperative we are," he said.

"We're not going to accept table scraps," Amos added. "But we have to give the process a chance to work. If it doesn't work, then we'll look for alternatives."

Sterritt said one way of revenue sharing might be to turn the tax base for the project over to northwest natives.

"The mayors of Terrace and Kitimat have been talking about getting at the tax base for this project," Sterritt noted. "We're looking for the same thing."

Overall, Amos and Sterritt said they're satisfied with the approval-in-principle and the restrictions placed on Orenda.

"I really hope that we learn from this experience," Amos added, noting the province's delay in deciding to take native concerns seriously delayed approval and threatened the proposed mill's chances.

"The end result could have been derailment of a project that could be good for all peoples in the area," he said. "And if this project had not gone ahead, you know who the scapegoats would have been — the Tsimshian, the Nisga'a and Haisla."

Process smacked

TERRACE — The provincial government was wrong in giving approval in principle to the Orenda project, says a local steelhead society spokesman.

"The government allowed this thing to be grandfathered under a flawed MPRP (Major Project Review Process)," said Rob Brown.

"At the minimum there should have been a new process. One that was fair, impartial and honest and then say 'yea' or 'nay'," he added.

Brown said he was disappointed in the location — south of Lakelse Lake — because it marks the beginning of industrialization in an environmentally sensitive area.

"It could have been put in Kitimat. There would have been an air problem but I think that could have been solved. Why put it between two fish watersheds?" he continued.

Although Brown said he was happy the natives received their own review of the project, the same wasn't given to other people in the area.

"What about the Second Nations, us? We had one bona fide public meeting — I'm not counting the dog and pony shows Orenda held — and everybody but one who got up said they were opposed to it," said Brown.

"A government that wanted to be fair and open and honest would have fallen all over itself to hold more public meetings," he said.

Another critic of the project felt the involvement of natives in the review provided a convenient cover for the provincial government.

"I'm somewhat disturbed at the emphasis the provincial government put on the so-called fiduciary rights vis a vis the native people," said Lakelse Lake resident John How.

"It gives the impression the natives had an influence in the decision making when in fact it was made by bureaucrats in Victoria and by the provincial cabinet," he said.

How also wondered why the province last week released results of the native review but won't circulate its own analysis of the project until later this month.

"This puts Indians front and centre and lets the people in Victoria sit back," he said. "When the report of the steering committee is released later this month, the issue will have died down."

Nisga'a attempt to delay gov't decision was denied

TERRACE — The Nisga'a Tribal Council wanted a 12-month delay in a provincial government decision on the Orenda Forests Products proposal to build a pulp and paper mill, a provincial official in charge of reviewing the project said last week.

But Frank Blasetti said the request — which came up in the land claim negotiations now underway between the Nisga'a and the federal and provincial governments — was denied.

When asked how the Nisga'a request was resolved, he said: "You can't resolve everything at the negotiating table."

The issue came up during discussions on what are called interim protection measures, said Blasetti who added he isn't close to the negotiations underway.

Interim protection measures are defined as ways for the Nisga'a to become more involved in resource use decisions pending a settlement of their claim.

Frank Blasetti

They also relate to resource activity underway on Nisga'a-claimed land.

The Nisga'a have previously said they didn't want any new developments on their territory until their claim was settled.

Blasetti didn't know when the request was made but did say it formed part of the information submitted to the provincial cabinet as part of the Major Projects Review Process into the Orenda project.

Nisga'a spokesman Harry Nyce said he couldn't comment on the decision to approve the project.

Asked if natives demanded the Orenda decision be delayed, he responded: "Not in so many words."

Nyce said Nisga'a negotiators made their concerns about the project known, but that nothing as specific as a deferral was discussed.

The mill was originally to be located within Nisga'a-claimed territory near Meziadin Lake. The company moved the site to just south of Lakelse Lake last summer when problems developed because of the Meziadin location.

Orenda will feed its mill using wood from a forest licence it holds that is within the Nisga'a claim area.

City still wants Orenda within tax boundaries

TERRACE — The city will again make the case to have the Orenda mill site included in its tax base, mayor Jack Talstra said last week.

"We've never been coy about that. We have no tax base," he said.

Talstra said the city is growing fast and providing a lot of regional services without the kind of industrial tax base that exists in Kitimat or in Prince Rupert.

"Services are being primarily borne by the taxpayers of Terrace and we just can't do that any longer," he added.

The city first asked the provincial government to have the site included in its boundaries last summer when Orenda announced it wanted to build south of Lakelse Lake.

"The response was that they would take a look at it in the broader context for the good of all the people in this area," said Talstra.

He acknowledged that the growing feeling that Thornhill needs a new type of government structure may have a bearing on what happens.

The city and the regional district have recently formed a committee to examine the situa-

Options now are for Thornhill to become a municipality or for the area to become part of Terrace. Talstra is skeptical about the latter taking place.

"As each year goes by it becomes more difficult to join the two areas and it may be impossible," he said.

And if Thornhill becomes its own municipality and then wants Orenda in its tax base, the issue will have to be addressed by the provincial government, Talstra added.

Native groups in the area have also said they want some kind of revenue sharing arrangement from the planned Orenda mill.

ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT YOU'RE INVITED.

Over the coming months, the province will carry out a process of public consultation toward new environmental assessment legislation.

A discussion paper has been produced that proposes a new environmental assessment act that will integrate ecological, social and economic factors into major project development and review. This will replace existing project review processes with a single, legislated assessment process.

Dale Lovick, MLA Nanaimo and Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Environment, Lands and Parks, is leading a province-wide public consultation process on proposed environmental assessment legislation. Mr. Lovick looks forward to hearing your comments.

To learn more about the government's proposals for improved environmental assessment, plan to attend an open house at:

Wednesday, April 22, 3 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Mr. Lovick will be available to hear your comments and ideas for environmental assessment at 7 p.m.

News brief

Fire rules change

SOME FORESTRY operations will now be allowed to operate on days when the fire-danger rating is high to extreme.

That's one of the changes under new forest fire prevention regulations introduced by forests minister Dan Miller.

Old rules shut down all logging operations on high to extreme rated days but they need to be changed to more accurately reflect the risk, he said.

"Under the new regulation, moderate-risk activities such as log loading and hauling will be allowed to continue," Miller said. High risk activities such as yarding logs will still be restricted to cooler parts of the day, the minister added.

The change also sees the campfire, railway and slash-fire prevention regulations rolled into one. This one regulation applies within 300 metres of a forest. The distance used to be one kilometre.

Unsuccessful tips

The four tips gathered here as a result of a TV show on substance abuse haven't generated any activity.

Northwest Crackdown, a three-hour show which aired in B.C. and three American states in January, gave information on substance abuse and then asked for information on suspected criminal activity.

"Nothing did result from those tips," said Corporal Rob McKay who is in charge of the local RCMP detachment's general investigative services section.

This effort is different than the new Vandal Watch program introduced here last month by the chamber of commerce.

Vandal Watch is meant to curb property damage by giving rewards for information which leads to a conviction or convictions.

Fancy rail service

Don't look for linen tableclothes and more menu selections on VIA Rail's Skeena run between Jasper and Prince Rupert.

Those and other features designed to elevate passenger rail service in Canada is being confined to VIA's transcontinental line.

The package is being introduced the end of this month and is meant to make long rail journeys a bit more enjoyable, says VIA spokesman Carla Whippy.

She did note that the Skeena run now enjoys refurbished equipment that runs on electricity and not on steam.

School construction?

It will be a couple more weeks before it's known whether Victoria will spend any of the $582 million announced last week for new school construction and improvements here in Terrace.

Education minister Anita Hagen's announcement on Thursday said only that the capital program includes at least 200 projects.

Replacement of Skeena Jr. Secondary school remains near the top of the school board's list of construction priorities here, but has been given a low priority by Victoria in previous years.

Hagen said the majority of high priority capital projects requested by school boards are expected to go forward.

The $582 million allocation is about three times the average annual grant for capital projects.

Local ranger patrol ready to carry out its mission

TERRACE — The Canadian military now has a presence in this area.

A group of 18 local residents has been formed into a Canadian Forces Ranger Patrol to act as the eyes and ears of reserve or regular forces should the need arise.

Each patrol member is a volunteer and has been issued with a .303 Lee Enfield rifle and 200 rounds of ammunition.

Training under the supervision of two members of the armed forces took place here last week.

The local patrol is the ninth one in the province to be formed over the past two years, said Major Ian Hay, a staff officer from Ranger headquarters at Esquimalt.

Use of Rangers dates back to the Second World War when approximately 15,000 of them served during the height of the Japanese threat to the west coast, he said.

The Ranger concept was abandoned in 1978 but revived again in 1990.

"We regard them as a very cost efficient and effective force," said Hay.

"If the forces, regular or reserve, require help in an area, the Rangers can respond. They can act as guides or gather information," he said.

The patrols will also act with search and rescue units should their assistance be required.

Six of the other nine Ranger patrols are located on Vancouver Island, joining ones at Kitkatla and Port Simpson on the northern coast.

Hay said there are plans to form similar patrols in New Aiyansh, Kincolith and Hartley Bay up here.

And although the Rangers may be new to Terrace, those in the patrol are not new to the armed forces. At least six of those who have signed up have had armed forces experience.

One of the six is Joe Bradley, a prospector who read about the Rangers in B.C. Report and then got the headquarters staff interested in forming a patrol here. "It wasn't hard to find the people. We could have easily doubled that," said Bradley.

RANGERS Joe Bradley, left, and Sam Lockerby, right, flank armed forces Sergeant Major Dave Haines. The Rangers number 18 in this area and will assist the armed forces if they ever have to come here. That's a Ranger issue .303 Lee Enfield being held by Bradley.

The other Rangers either work outdoors as he does or are people experienced and knowledgeable about the area surrounding Terrace.

That fits in with the concept of Rangers being able to withstand outdoors conditions in order to perform their duties.

"We like them to be familiar with the territory and to be self supporting when they go out into the field," said Major Hay.

The patrols are open to females and there are five women in the Terrace group.

Bradley and the other Rangers are happy about the Lee Enfield .303s issued them from storage. That's because they were made in a Long Branch, Ontario plant considered to produce a better quality model than ones made in England.

The .303 rifle figures prominently in a Ranger patrol. Each group will choose at least one person as a representative at a provincial shooting competition.

The winner of the provincial meet then goes to Ottawa for national competitions.

The need to read

Of all the necessities in life, reading is the most important. It's the one connection that brings all of us together. The ability to read — and to write — allows us to communicate our thoughts and opinions. It provides the basic tool for survival in an increasingly complex world which demands knowledge as the key to everything.

Putting that principle into action is the goal of two local groups — the library board and Project Literacy Terrace. It hasn't been an easy task for either one.

For four years, the library board has been promoting an extension to its building. The journey has been one of ups and downs. Its initial plan was shelved when the city decided instead to promote the now-cancelled plan to build a community/conference centre.

Just last month the library board successfully gained the support of the city and of the regional district to hold a referendum to borrow money. And then the provincial government wiped out the lottery grant system the board had been counting on for the remaining one-third of the $1.8 million estimated cost of the extension.

That's why it was encouraging to hear veteran library backer Willy Schneider speak to the chamber of commerce last week. Despite the lottery grant disappointment, Mr. Schneider said the board will press on. It'll lobby for a 'yes' vote for the referendum. It'll continue the effort to secure money from the provincial government. It'll explore the possibility of federal government money.

The measure of the library board's commitment is its plan to once again examine the cost of the extension provided city and regional district taxpayers say 'yes' in the June referendum. Mr. Schneider said the $800,000 wanted from city taxpayers and the $400,000 from regional district taxpayers is the limit. There will be no more requests.

That could very well mean, depending upon how much money from other sources the library can raise, a scaling down of the project. But Mr. Schneider was firm in saying the final result won't sacrifice the space required for library users into the next century. That kind of position, in return, deserves a 'yes' vote in June.

The other group struggling is Project Literacy Terrace. Financed by a small federal grant last year, the group opened an office to seek out people who wanted to learn to read. It trained volunteer tutors and did a survey to determine the need for more work in this area.

More than 60 people have been assisted since the office opened. It may sound like a small number but the benefit to those who were helped can't be calculated. Reading opens the doors to opportunity and those people have now stepped through to a different world.

The survey determined there is a need for more literacy efforts in this area. It was accompanied by an outline for a course to teach literacy in the work place. The concept is that improved reading skills result in a healthier workforce equipped to handle the growing educational needs of today.

But that grant will soon end. If more money isn't made available the danger is that what has been accomplished will be lost.

That should not happen. Money is not the easiest thing to come by. But this is not money spent wildly. This is an investment in the future of those who live in the north. And it is an investment that will be paid back many times in many ways. Project Literacy Terrace must continue.

He's glad to help out friend Kempf

VICTORIA — If I've learned one thing in my 30-year career as a reporter and columnist it's that there are two sides to every story. The story of Jack Kempf's conviction on a breach-of-trust charge is no different.

The one side everyone who followed the Kempf case knows by now is that he changed his plea to guilty, was fined $11,000, and put on probation for one year. I'd like to write one more column about Jack Kempf and tell you about the other side of that story.

A week before Kempf was to be sentenced, I phoned his lawyer, Brian Davis, to ask whether I could be of any help. I said I would be quite willing to appear as a character witness for Kempf. I asked for one condition, that I pay my own way, and not be reimbursed by Kempf.

Davis accepted both my offer and my condition, and a week later, I found myself in a Vancouver courtroom as a character witness on behalf of Kempf, along with Graham Lea, former NDP Member of the Legislature, and Linda Babb, a former assistant to Kempf.

Steering me gently through my testimony, Davis asked how long had I known Kempf. For about 10 years, I said.

Wasn't it a bit unusual for a journalist to stand up for a politician? Maybe, but I wasn't here as a journalist. I was here as someone standing up for a friend.

And just in case the judge was still wondering what a political columnist, who is supposed to eat politicians for breakfast, was doing in his courtroom as a character witness for a politician in trouble, I thought I'd better elaborate a bit.

Contrary to opinions held in some quarters, I said, not all journalists are a "pack of wolves catering to the worst instincts of our society." I'm sure the judge recognized the quote. It was from one of his fellow judges, Mary Southan.

From the Capital

by Hubert Beyer

What did I know of Kempf's abilities as an administrator? Worse than mine, I replied. Kempf was a great politician, but a terrible administrator.

What was my opinion of Kempf's honesty and integrity? I had no reason to doubt either.

Lea told the court of his association with Kempf, which saw the two on opposing sides of the political fence. Lea, too, left no doubt that Kempf had a propensity to get into frequent trouble by refusing to put his brains in gear before his mouth.

But Lea also pointed out that he considered Kempf an honourable man, whose word was his bond. And so did dozens of written testimonials from both former colleagues and constituents.

There were letters of support from people such as Grace McCarthy, Pat McGeer and Bruce Strachan, and there were letters from ordinary folks whom Kempf had represented in Victoria.

Why did I choose to come to Kempf's aid? The simple answer is because I like him, and because he seemed to need a friend when the chips were down.

I usually treat politicians at arm's length. It's generally not a good idea for a journalist to get too close to politicians, because sooner or later, there are critical things to be written.

With Kempf I made an exception, and I've never regretted it. Jack has been and still is as good a friend as one might wish for.

Kempf always embodied what I thought a northern politician should be. He fought fiercely for his constituents, but he never fit any political mold.

He would just as soon savage his own party than give in to the temptation of political expediency. He was at his best as an independent.

But he did breach the trust, didn't he? After all, he pleaded guilty to the charge which involved leasing a motor home with constituency funds and using the vehicle as collateral for a personal loan.

There was nothing wrong with leasing the motor home per se. Kempf used the vehicle as a mobile constituency office, which made perfect sense in as huge a riding as Omineca. What got him into trouble was that he used the motor home as collateral for a loan.

The judge appeared to take a rather lenient view of the whole thing, suggesting that it was more of a technical breach of trust, but the prosecutor disagreed. Under most circumstances, the judge said, the case would qualify for an unconditional discharge. The high office Kempf had held, however, made it impossible to discharge him.

In the end, the judge had to walk a fine line between satisfying the prosecution or risk a Crown appeal. The fine and the probation were the result.

As for my involvement in the case, I'm glad I was able to help out a friend and I wouldn't hesitate a moment to do so again.

Ribbons tell tale

In a December Wizard of Id comic strip, the princess points to a ribbon on Rodney's chest and asks, "What is that little ribbon for, Rodney?"

"Perfect attendance," he answers.

"At what?"

"Sick call," butts in the king.

Wearing ribbons has become a silent language. Black ribbons have always signified mourning. Yellow ribbons — of the sort wound around oak trees until the hostages returned — connote steadfast love. MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) wants every driver to fly a red ribbon from his vehicle's antenna like a 1960's racoon tail to remind us of the many people killed by drunken drivers. Orange ribbons mark surveyors' trails.

Lately, men have begun sporting white ribbons to make known their abhorrence of violence against women.

Ribbons are a passive, inexpensive way to support a cause. Instead of jogging 14 sweaty kilometres or donating 50 hard earned dollars, it takes only a few inches of narrow satin and a wee safety pin. No silkscreening. No printing. No assembling of teeny parts like a Remembrance Day poppy or a St. Patrick's Day shamrock.

At the rate causes are proliferating, we're gonna need greater ribbon variety to accurately express our sentiments. That could mean ribbons of varying widths — to signify degree of commitment — polka dots for the undecided, and various combinations of coloured stripes or plaids for those working to right several wrongs at once.

Ribbon etiquette will need clarification by Dear Abby and Miss Manners. What is the proper place on the lapel to pin ribbons? May they be pinned side by side like military medals? Eventually, for a Harper Collins book, Margaret Visser will research the origin and evolution of ribbons as emblems of societal protestation.

Activists will compile a ribbon wardrobe just as fashion models assemble a palette of nail polishes or lipsticks. Jewelry boxes will be built with another tray especially for filing ribbons between proclaimed Weeks.

Museums will consign a niche to the history of protest ribbons. Collectors will trade ribbons like hockey cards. Before auctions, Sothebys will send out auction scouts to appraise ribbon collections.

Good Housekeeping's Heloise will publish tips on the laundering of activist ribbons. Woman's Day will print easy-to-follow instructions for piecing ribbons into declarative cushions or quilts. Chateaufort will offer fashion advice on suitable fabrics and colours as ribbon backdrops. B.C.

Woman will run an article on a Sooke woman who weaves ribbon on a hand loom.

In Terrace, rather than another hamburger drive-in, a franchised ribbon outlet will open in the mall. Special recycling bins will be set up for frayed ribbons. No doubt we'll be admonished to remove pins before recycling, just as we are now directed to remove labels from cans and bottles.

Stripes in clothing will be frowned upon. Their mixed messages could lead to unexpected violence. After all, a striped jersey like Jughead's could send conflicting messages.

Is there a colour left to protest this ribbon rash?

FIRST-YEAR university transfer student Jazzy Gill, 18, and other students at Northwest Community College wait to see whether the University of Northern British Columbia will offer them a good alternative to the universities of southern B.C. The student association says UNBC will have to offer advanced regional programming or unique programs in Prince George to attract students from this region.

ICBC loses

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. (ICBC) lost $98 million in 1991, says the corporation's annual report.

Premium income for the year was up nine per cent over 1990 but ICBC paid out $1.535 million in claims, a 13 per cent hike. That translated to paying out $1.10 for every dollar of premium income.

The corporation was also hurt by a $16 million drop in earnings from its investments which brought in $316 million last year.

ICBC has covered the loss by drawing the $98 million from its accumulated surplus built up in previous years. It also depleted the reserve by a further $82 million to cover the expected, continued increase in the cost of settling claims.

As a result, the surplus now stands at just $155 million, less than half its 1990 year-end level of $335 million.

Commenting on the report, ICBC president Tom Holmes warned if claims costs continued to rise, "the only possible result will be higher premiums."

On the road

Council has approved the following city travel requests:

- economic development officer Peter Monteith went to attend and to man a city display booth at a forestry conference and trade show in Smithers last week. The estimated cost was $700;

- planner Marvin Kamenz to attend the Planning Institute of B.C. conference in Kelowna, B.C., Apr. 22-24 ($683);

- engineering director Stew Christensen to attend the B.C. Water and Waste Association annual conference in Whistler, Apr. 26-29 ($950);

- aldermen Danny Sheridan and Ruth Hallock to attend the North Central Municipal Association annual convention in Dawson Creek, Apr. 30-May 2;

- firefighter Lt. Per Halvorsen to attend the Fire Prevention Officers Association of B.C. annual seminar in Whistler, May 11-15 ($1,025);

- fire chief Bob Beckett to attend the B.C. Fire Chief's conference in Penticton, June 7-11 ($1,100).

Requests granted

Council has agreed to proclaim April Conquer Cancer Month and allow the local branch of the Canadian Cancer Society to hang a banner across Eby St. at city hall.

The Legion was given permission to have West Coast Amusements set up its carnival in the curling club parking lot Apr. 23-25.

An Inn of the West request to have the 4600 block of Lakelse closed 1-4 p.m., Sunday, August 2 for the Slingers Race — an annual Riverboat Days event — was also approved.

Task force recommendations

Here are the recommendations from the report of the MLAs' task force into northern post-secondary education. The three MLAs involved were Bulkley Valley MLA Jackie Pement, Skeena MLA Helmut Giesbrecht and Prince George North MLA Paul Ramsey. They met 350 people at public meetings held throughout the north.

Control and Governance

- That membership of the Interim Governing Council should expand to provide greater regional representation and the IGC should broaden its representation of women, aboriginal peoples, labour and trades, and innovative educators.
- That IGC members have a "job description" to ensure accountability to the communities they serve.
- That innovative administrative structures be explored to address the concerns of the communities for regional input into planning and programming.

Communication

- That UNBC develop a communication strategy and timelines for informing the people of the region of the University's plans.
- That the IGC "open up" the council and its committee meetings, and allow for public decision making.
- That UNBC develop a communication vehicle to provide students with information on programming through high school visits, and advertising, etc.
- That UNBC develop a communication structure to involve its educational partners (school districts, colleges, private institutes) in providing information from and about the university.

Regionalization

- Explore possible models for regionalization of UNBC programs in each community through study conferences, questionnaires and other methods of consultation.
- Develop a clear regional plan to replace the Dahloff model including programs, delivery methods, and timelines.
- Use regional expertise and hire educators and administrators with Northern British Columbian background whenever possible.
- Encourage the hiring of native staff and counsellors.
- Work towards gender equity within UNBC staff.
- Hire people who have a commitment to regionalization and a regional vision for this unique university.
- Report budgets and financing to the communities.

Expectations

- Four common themes emerged from the public meetings, which are reflected in the above recommendations:
- People feel planning for the regional delivery of UNBC's programs and services occur at the same time as the development of the Prince George campus.
  - They want more "regional" representatives on the Interim Governing Council (IGC).
  - They want UNBC to develop "non-traditional" approaches to delivery systems, administrative structures and partnerships with other educational institutions, in order to meet the post secondary needs of the northern communities it will service.
  - They want the building and opening of the Prince George campus to proceed as quickly as possible.

UNBC report

Miscommunication spawns confusion

TERRACE — Confusion reigned in the northwest when the University of Northern B.C. abandoned its original decentralized vision without adequately telling people of the change, a report issued last week says.

The report from a task force of three northern MLAs — Helmut Giesbrecht, Jackie Pement and Paul Ramsey — fingered the university's communication problems as a root cause of much of the opposition it has faced.

In particular, the MLAs pointed to Urban Dahloff's report of 1988, which was commissioned by the Interior University Society before Victoria created UNBC.

The so-called Dahloff model first promoted the idea of farming out entire faculties to different regional campuses. That plan was abandoned early in 1990 in favour of the university's present blueprint to provide regional services administered out of a central campus at Prince George.

"Questions during the meetings indicated many were not aware of changes made," the report says. "The result has been consternation and confusion as many communities didn't realize that the plans for regionalization of UNBC had changed."

The task force report also says people at the meetings said they had problems interacting with the university's governing council, expressing "hostility and mistrust" towards its members.

"The Dahloff report disappeared and nobody seemed to know how or why," said Giesbrecht. "People were still thinking about regional little campuses. They (university officials) weren't communicating those new ideas enough."

The report also mentioned a study by Northwest Community College vice-president Michael Hill that calls for a tri-centre model for the university.

Hill's study — stating that "the core of the university need not be a single place or location" — suggests degree-completion campuses in three places: Prince George, Terrace, and either Fort St. John or Dawson Creek.

"I didn't envision a lot of migration of students from one area to another," Hill said of his study, adding that students will probably only stay if the UNBC is accessible to them in the regions.

He calls the decision to move away from the Dahloff model to a central Prince George campus unfortunate.

"Personally, I think that's a shame," he said. "The decentralized model is very workable and very sensible."

The task force report noted the public demand for a regionalized, non-traditional university. Laddering and transferability of programs were a concern.

The report said people also want more control of UNBC given to the regions — in the form of more regional members on the governing council, and more accountability of those people to their regions.

"It was apparent that some communities had very little contact or had little involvement with UNBC (particularly in the northwest region)," the report says. "Although UNBC staff have made contact with colleges, Rotary clubs, Chambers of Commerce, etc., the information has not spread to the community at large."

University taking action

TERRACE — The University of Northern B.C. reacted quickly and defensively to the release of a task force report on its operations last week.

University officials issued a statement saying many of the recommendations are already being acted upon and others will be given careful consideration.

They noted the seven new appointments to the Interim Governing Council — two of whom are from the northwest. Preparations are being made to improve communications with students and the public, the statement said, and the Interim Governing Council has been holding public meetings since the beginning of the year.

"The MLAs report clearly reveals the very high expectations people have of UNBC," the statement said. "It also reveals that these expectations are many in number and sometimes a little contradictory."

The substance of the report isn't as important as the process that took place, suggested Jake Muller, president of the faculty union at Northwest Community College.

"I think it's not so much what's in it, but the fact that it gave people an opportunity to express their views about UNBC," he said.

NWCC president Don Anderson said better communication with people here — as called for in the report — would likely produce more support.

"People in communities here have not reacted well to a dog-and-pony show," he said. "But there's still a chance, I think, for things to turn around."

The Start is for people learning how to read.

Cartoon draws a blast

Dear Sir:

Re: your editorial cartoon dated April 1, 1992 containing caption "There must be a better way to make two by fours".

The forest industry is the economic backbone of Terrace and area. This is a renewable resource and is here for the long term. The alternative to lumber is steel, plastic or cement.

Perhaps the editor would care to explain to the people of Terrace how they would be able to afford these alternatives if the forest industry were to shut down as you appear to be advocating.

It seems to be a bit of a paradox for a company that depends on newsprint made from wood fibre to be criticizing the forest industry. Perhaps the people of Terrace should turn to radio and or television for their news and advertising so that you are not contributing to the destruction of our forests.

Your writers and photographers will continue to be welcome in our plant and forest licence areas so that people of Terrace have access to the truth. All that we ask in return is that you report on a non-biased basis.

This century said lacking in mercy to human beings

Dear Sir:

I would like to add to the voices of protest in regards to the recent assaults on human life by means of abortion and euthanasia. We are coming to the end of a century that has seen great technological advances and yet, paradoxically, a century that has seen the bloodiest assault on human life.

The recent Gulf War was a graphic demonstration of man's inhumanity to man by means of high technology. Yet all of the horrible casualties from WWI to this day are small in comparison to the number of deaths by abortion.

During the 21 years of legalized abortion in Canada there have been over 10 times more deaths of the unborn by abortion than during the last 117 years of warfare by this nation.

With all of our capabilities we are responding to social and moral problems surrounding unwanted pregnancies in a way that might have occurred when we lived by the laws of the jungle — the survival of the fittest.

These statistics would be tragic if the abortions were an illegal activity. For abortion to be sanctioned and funded by a government is a catastrophic travesty of justice and law.

Next on the pro-death agenda is the elimination of unwanted elderly and infirm. They too are being categorized as "sub-humans" so that they can be pressured to prematurely end their lives for reasons of economic gain and the convenience of others.

Your newspaper reported that city council is being asked to give "its views on euthanasia to the provincially funded Seniors Advisory Council. They want to know what seniors think of allowing doctors to administer fatal doses of medication to the terminally ill — an act which is now and has always been a crime in every sense of the word.

What hellish irony it is for death wish seniors to collaborate in the future deaths of others of their age group! According to the statistics coming out of the Netherlands, the Dutch government reports more than 2,300 cases of voluntary euthanasia a year — but also more than 1,000 cases where doctors kill patients "without" their consent.

Any vet will tell you that we condone killing of

Report points to acid rain

Dear Sir:

A comment to Mr. Jorma Jyrkkanen's Orenda mill plan report (Terrace Standard, April 1, 1992). I think his report has some very valid points.

Acid rain will haunt the Terrace area for years to come if that environmental problem is not solved before the mill is built.

Jobs are important first for the construction industry and second for permanent jobs. But if the environment takes a beating again and again like in other pulp mill areas, then the risks involved

Alcan case word soon?

TERRACE — Federal appeal court justices have reserved decision on Alcan's appeal of last year's landmark ruling that shut down the Kemano Completion Project.

They aren't expected to make a ruling on the company's appeal until sometime later this year.

Evidence concluded Friday afternoon with lawyers for Alcan and for the environmental group Save the Bulkley making their final arguments.

The aluminum company argued for the overturning of federal court Justice Allison Walsh's May 18, 1991 decision. That ruling ordered a full federal environmental review of the $1-billion hydroelectric project.

Walsh quashed the federal cabinet's attempt to exempt Kemano from the government's federal environmental assessment and review guidelines. He also threw out a 1987 deal between Ottawa and Alcan setting out how much of the Nechako watershed the company would be allowed to divert to its power generators at Kemano.

Nearly 800 workers employed on the project have been laid off since the ruling, which prompted Alcan to halt work a month later.

The appeal had started in December, but was delayed until spring when the scheduled amount of court time ran out.

The coalition of natives and environmentalists who oppose the project claimed victory against Alcan was near in January after the Supreme Court of Canada with environmentalists in a similar case in Alberta. In that case, Supreme Court justices ruled 8-1 that the $355 million Ojibwa River dam shouldn't have been built without a federal environmental review, and is effectively illegal.

Rivers Defence Coalition spokesman Pat Moss predicted that ruling would be pivotal in the federal appeal court's ruling on Kemano.

Help form house group

Dear Sir:

Back in 1973 the former NDP government built the only public housing in Terrace for disabled/handicapped people and seniors.

Since then the Willows, as the complex is called, has been taken over by seniors with little or no special accommodation given to disabled people in Terrace.

That's not the only problem with public housing in the Terrace area. According to Gerry King, coordinator for the Terrace Anti-poverty Group, Terrace is generally in real need of low cost housing too.

In the past 17 years nothing has been constructed for disabled/handicapped or low income residents. Furthermore, the people who control public housing in the region are acting like a bunch of prima donnas about the issue — greeting every attempt to lobby the new government like it's a personal attack on them and creating scare tactics scenarios that paint the lobbyists as troublemakers rather than future homemakers.

Recently at an anti-poverty workshop, local residents were encouraged to form a Terrace & District Public Housing Association to lobby the Province to create more public and low cost housing in the area.

Persons interested in forming such an association should contact me at 635-4216. It would lobby Victoria for a new complex like the Willows, Co-op housing and/or any form of low cost housing depending on the demand.

If I'm not available call back or let Gerry King at 635-4631 know your desire to become involved.

On acid rain

can not be measured with jobs and money.

The cradle of the fish habitat which many people depend upon is at stake here. The tourist industry also. In the long run we always can eat fish; pulp is questionable.

Another problem arises — pumping the mill water supply out of the ground. Not only will the creeks go down the drain.

The Lakelse Lake area is an active earthquake zone. Any mega pumping of ground water will trigger a geological activity. Let's look at that point for a moment and get expert advice on that matter.

Compost creators get the good news

TERRACE — "Happy composting."

That's the message 300 lucky residents got last week from city operations director John Colongard as a recorded message informed them they'd been successful in the draw for a bargain-priced composter.

With only 369 people having put their names in, the draw was conducted on an elimination style with Freeman of the city Vesta Douglas pulling out the 59 less fortunate entries.

Colongard said all entries had been checked prior to the draw to ensure the individuals lived within the city and were on a residential garbage collection route.

For those winners who had not collected their composters yet, he said they had the rest of the week to so at the public works yard on Graham Ave. between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The city put together the composter plan in an effort to reduce the amount of refuse going into local garbage cans and, from there, into the landfill.

With the province and the city each kicking in one-third of the cost of the composters, draw winners were able to pick theirs up for just $20.

The city estimates the average home placing kitchen and garden refuse in composters could reduce the amount of garbage it puts out for collection by as much as a third.

That, in turn, could mean 90 tonnes less garbage going to the dump each year, a potential saving of $21.55 per bin, per year.

Total cost to the city of the scheme was $6,100.

Society angry

TERRACE — A spokesman for a local group is angry the provincial government won't send somebody up to talk about fish farms.

Alois Schillinger of the B.C. Coast Marine Life Protection Society said an appearance here is more important than ever because of plans to introduce Atlantic salmon in fresh water lakes.

Those plans to raise Atlantic salmon in cages in fresh water lakes are now being studied by the provincial environment and agriculture and fisheries ministries.

One lake, Kennedy Lake, near Port Alberni has already been identified as a possible location and Schillinger thinks the northern fresh waters could be next.

What worries him is the dangers of Atlantic stock mixing with domestic varieties and of the potential for diseases spreading in the closed environment of lakes.

Schillinger and the society have been past critics of how the provincial government regulates ocean-based fish farms.

In particular, Schillinger says the use of large amounts of antibiotics is dangerous and that fish effluent first covers and then destroys life on ocean floors.

"This is our environment, not theirs," said Schillinger last week.

An agriculture and fisheries minister official last week said the ministry wasn't ignoring Schillinger or his society's opinions.

"An advisory council on aquaculture has been formed to review all aspects. Mr. Schillinger is one of many people interested. He has made several submissions on aquaculture," said Stuart Culbertson.

Yet Culbertson said he didn't see the value in having ministry employees come to Terrace to "be subjected to a whole bunch of pointed questions and allegations."

"They should have the courtesy to counter our claims," replied Schillinger.

He said fish farms have been continually reviewed but that nothing of value has ever been decided.

As for the question of raising Atlantic salmon in fresh water lakes, Culbertson said the matter will be studied and opinions sought before any final decision is made.

ROTTEN LUCK. With far fewer entries than expected in the city's great composter draw it was decided to draw only the names of the unlucky. Freeman of the city Vesta Douglas (above) was called in to perform the task.

Rural residents facing increase in their taxes

TERRACE — Homeowners in Thornhill and the region's other unincorporated areas will see their property tax rates go up an average of 14 per cent this year.

Kitimat-Stikine regional district directors approved a $1.93 million tax levy in their $5.8 million 1992 budget on March 28.

They're once again projecting nearly $475,000 in revenue from fuel sales and moorage fees at the district-operated MK Bay Marina in Kitimat — the biggest variable item in the budget.

The marina only generated $286,000 last year — nearly $200,000 below what was budgeted — but expenses were similarly reduced because the marina's fuel depot didn't open until July.

An ongoing problem for the regional district is the escalating cost of its refuse sites.

Much of the cost increases are because the environment ministry has brought in numerous restrictions on dump practices in recent years.

"The pollution control and environmental standards have changed," says Thornhill director Les Watmough. "There's a whole new procedure to go through. You have to bury more frequently. You can't burn. All of these things cost you extra money."

But despite cost increases of nearly 20 per cent — bringing refuse costs to a record $220,000 in this budget — taxes for the dumps won't be going up.

That's because the district is already taxing residents at the maximum allowable amount for the dumps. To make them pay more, that maximum taxation limit will have to be removed — and the district will have to get residents to agree to the change in either by referendum or petition.

The result is a $161,000 accumulated deficit carried over to next year's budget. "The deficit is increasing a lot faster than we expected it to," Watmough conceded.

But he says the district doesn't plan to change that taxation cap until its solid waste management plan is done. He said the regional district will soon be given responsibility for the Terrace landfill site as well.

An ongoing problem for the regional district is the escalating cost of its refuse sites. Much of the cost increases are because the environment ministry has brought in numerous restrictions in recent years.

"We have to see what that will do to our costs first," he explained. The district has three more years to complete the waste management plan.

The major cost items that affect local taxpayers in the district's $3.37 million list of planned expenditures are:

- General government services: $675,000 (+17%). Includes $249,000 in staff costs, $139,000 in office overhead, $98,000 in directors' pay and expenses, and $81,000 in aid grants ($50,000 of which has been allocated to the Kitimat Cross-country Ski Club for the ski trails at Onion Lake). The levy on Terrace taxpayers is $97,700 while Thornhill taxpayers pay $21,200.

- Thornhill water system: $604,000 (-1%). Debt payments on system and operating costs. Most of the revenue comes from provincial grants, user fees and frontage taxes. Residents weren't charged the usual $12,500 tax levy last year because of an error on the tax notices, so they'll pay a double levy — $25,000 — this year.

- MK Bay Marina: $515,000 (+119%). Increased costs in '92 are to be made up by increased revenues. Tax levy: $25,900 Terrace, $5,400 Thornhill.

- Planning services: $236,000 (+18%). Increase reflects hiring of an extra planner. Tax levy: $15,000 Terrace, $60,000 Thornhill.

- Refuse sites: $219,700 (+19%). The district carries a $161,000 accumulated deficit over into 1993 on this item. Taxes can't be raised any further to pay for the district's dump site costs until a maximum cap on refuse taxation is changed.

- Arena and swimming pool: $218,500 (+8%). Cost-sharing payments to City of Terrace for pool and arena. Tax levy: $207,100 on Thornhill and most of electoral area 'C'.

- Thornhill Fire Department: $186,980 (+9%). Tax levy: Thornhill, $172,500.

- Thornhill dog control: $91,000 (+5%). Tax levy: $74,875 in Thornhill.

- Kitsumkalum Mountain: $83,500 (-13%). Repayment of the capital debt on the long-defunct Kitsumkalum ski hill. The regional district is to start receiving interest payments from the Shames Mountain Ski Corporation next January for the Kitsumkalum ski lift equipment Shames bought from the regional district in 1986. Shames doesn't have to begin repaying the $320,000 principal on the loan until 1996. Tax levy: $15,450 Terrace, $7,400 Thornhill.

- Economic Development Commission: $61,000 (-3%). Tax levy: $5,600 Thornhill, $500 Terrace.

- Thornhill street lights: $57,200 (+7%). Thornhill tax levy: $58,000.

- Thornhill Community Centre: $53,600 (+9%). Thornhill tax levy: $36,000.

- Parks and recreation: $52,000 (+6%). Includes possible construction of tennis courts and fields at Thornhill Jr. Secondary school, to be shared with School District 88. Levy: $52,000.

- Feasibility study reserve fund: $50,000. Tax levy: $8,500 Terrace, $1,800 Thornhill.

- Bus Service: $40,350 (+1%). Thornhill tax levy of $45,400 covers a small deficit from 1991 on that account.

- Library cost-sharing: $50,200 (+2%). Tax levy: 49,656.

- Bylaw enforcement: $10,600 (+1%). Thornhill tax levy: $8,800.

Water shortage forecast if more wells come up dry

TERRACE — Water, water everywhere and nary a drop to drink.

Despite sitting on the banks of the second largest river in the province, the city is coming up dry in its search for underground drinking water, says engineering director Stew Christensen.

As anticipated, the Christy Park test hole hit water. Unfortunately, he explained, the dark (turbid), salty liquid more than limited out on several counts.

Turbidity was seven times acceptable limits, chloride content was more than four times too high, the ratio of iron was 1.55 milligrams per litre compared to an acceptable 0.3 mg/L and the calcium carbonate content was nearly four times the permitted level.

The exploratory work is being carried out by Industrial Drillers Ltd. of Prince George which was awarded the $68,000 contract.

As for the other test sites, Christensen said the C.D. Adams Park hole — that's near Braun St. on the city's south side — hit bedrock at 200ft. without turning up any significant quantity of water.

As of the beginning of this week, drilling was still taking place at Kerr (Rotary) Park, also on the south side. However, crew members reported they'd gone down 160ft. so far and only hit "slop".

*****

If the Kerr Park test also fails to find an adequate quantity of drinkable water, residents could find themselves facing water use restrictions six weeks from now.

At the time the drilling contract was awarded, Christensen explained a low snow pack in the Deep Creek watershed meant the city might be unable to draw any further water from that source after the first week of June.

It would then be completely dependent on water pumped from the Skeena River. However, he pointed out, the size of the pipes from the pump-house limits the amount the city can draw from the river to 16 million litres a day, well below the more than 20 million litres daily demand can hit during a hot spell.

THIRD TIME LUCKY? That's what the city's hoping for after drilling crews searching for a sub-terranean water supply twice drew a blank. As of Friday, however, it wasn't looking too promising at the Kerr-Rotary Park site above.

Beaver fever fears raised

TERRACE — The head of the Skeena Health Unit says failure to find an underground source of drinking water would be bad news.

"I was really hoping the city would be able to find a suitable source of well water," Dr. David Bowering said last week.

That was because the alternative would be relying heavily on the Skeena River for the community's drinking water.

"We tend to have more cases of giardia — beaver fever — when water is being drawn from the Skeena rather than Deep Creek," he explained.

That's not surprising, he pointed out, given any surface run-off water can be contaminated by giardia cysts and the Skeena, given its length, offers a markedly greater potential for upstream contamination than Deep Creek.

In contrast, he added, well water offers the safest type of water.

Emotions and voices high during land claims talks

TERRACE — Negotiators for the three sides in the Nisga'a land claim talks wouldn't say why their April 9 negotiating session broke up in a shouting match.

"Any set of negotiations will have its ups and downs," Nisga'a Tribal Council president Alvin McKay said when questioned about the yelling audible within the closed conference room just minutes before a scheduled 5 p.m. press conference.

"We are moving ahead," McKay added. "The negotiations involve many complex issues. It's not always easy."

The Thursday session was the third of full negotiations to be held here last week. These sessions take place once a month. Smaller groups met regularly to go over specific items.

The Nisga'a claim nearly 25,000 square kilometres of northwestern B.C. centred on the Nass River valley.

Representatives of the Nisga'a and the federal and provincial governments were saying little about the issues under discussion during last week's talks.

"We've agreed to keep certain things confidential," said Tony Sheridan, the province's negotiator. "So yes, we're responding in a general way."

No details were given on the progress of talks on interim measures prior to a final settlement. That topic involves negotiation of whether third parties — such as logging or mining companies — will be allowed to start developments or carry out business in Nisga'a-claimed territory while the talks are on.

"The interests of third parties and the interests of all British Columbians must be balanced," Sheridan said.

When asked about the possibility of a town hall meeting in Terrace to meet the public and answer questions about the Nisga'a negotiations, Sheridan called the suggestion "an interesting option that might be explored."

"It's a big province," he said. "There's a lot of people. And you can't always meet with everyone."

Federal government negotiator Gay Reardon said Gitanyow hereditary chiefs won't be allowed into the Nisga'a talks when negotiations involve the overlap area that both tribal groups claim.

Gitanyow president Glen Williams had made that demand earlier this year, saying interim measures on resource use questions are being decided that affect the land that's also claimed by Gitanyow chiefs.

Reardon noted the framework agreement sets out a process for the existing three parties. "That would preclude the Gitanyow from becoming party to the negotiations at this time," she said.

Alvin McKay

Nisga'a hold vote

TERRACE — Martin Adams was named vice president of the Nisga'a Tribal Council local here at elections last week.

He replaces Ernie Morven who becomes business manager. It's one of three urban locals belonging to the tribal council. The others are in Vancouver and in Prince Rupert.

Charles McKay was returned as trustee and Gloria Adams is treasurer.

The positions become official during the tribal council annual convention the end of this month in New Aiyansh. All terms are for one year.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Grocery store, Credit Union bringing in debit cards

Need for cash to soon decline

TERRACE — The first hints of how shopping will be done in the future are arriving here.

The Terrace and District Credit Union is introducing debit cards.

And Safeway is installing equipment that'll take debit cards and Mastercard.

Debit cards permit a purchaser to pay directly from a bank account if a business is equipped with a point of sales computer system.

The credit union's debit cards will replace the Cue cards now in use but they can also be used in automated banking machines, said credit union manager Dennis Brewer.

"All credit unions in Canada will have cards that look the same across the country so merchants will be able to recognize them," said Brewer.

The estimated 1,200 local credit union members who have Cue cards will get the new ones as their Cue cards expire.

Although the credit union Mastercard also acts as an automated bank machine card it can't also be used as a debit card, said Brewer.

That means credit union members will have two cards — a Mastercard and a combined debit/bank machine card.

The debit card works on the same personal identification number system as does a bank machine card.

The purchaser will give the store his or her debit card and in return receive a key pad in which the identification number is recorded. That then allows the purchaser to choose from which bank account payment should be taken.

Meanwhile Safeway's system to take debit cards and Mastercard will be installed in all of its western Canada next month, says company spokesman Don Bell.

"We think it'll be a real convenience for shoppers," he said. For now the Safeway system will accept as debit cards only those bank cards connected to the Bank of Montreal system, said Bell.

But that will change by fall when Safeway will switch to a system permitting the use of all other debit and bank cards, he added.

The Bank of Montreal and Safeway connection is part of a program by which customers can earn points toward airline tickets.

GOING UP at Lazelle Mini-Storage are more units. The walls will be concrete and will be poured on site. That's Aldo Venditelli pounding anchor bolts into a form for one of the walls. San-Berry Construction is doing the work.

TERRACE — Skeena Broadcasters news director Roger Millions is leaving.

He's going to Saskatchewan to work at an AM radio station in Melfort.

Millions arrived in Terrace to work for Skeena Broadcasters, which runs CFTK-TV and AM and FM radio stations in the northwest, in late 1990.

Born on the Prairies, Millions spent all of his broadcast career there before coming to B.C.

Another video store has closed here.

The 24 Video outlet fell victim when its parent, Vancouver-based Brenton Capital Video Incorporated, was placed in receivership last week, says company spokesman Frank Worsley.

But there are no plans to close Crazy Mike's, the company's other video store in town, he said.

"The receiver made a decision to close some stores and that's what happened," Worsley.

Efforts are now underway to sell the remaining stores belonging to Brenton. The company owned 102 stores before the receivership took effect.

The Crazy Mike's outlet here was bought by Brenton late last year.

TRAVEL TALK

NEW ZEALAND Taranaki & Wanganui

Explore the south of the North Island and you'll find a land of sharp contrasts: verdant rural countryside; the stark and striking volcanic cone of Mount Taranaki; a bustling capital city. The folk you meet over a cuppa in the tea shop of a rural township are a world away from the sophisticated life of Wellington. Yet within a few hours, you can be floating through primeval forest in a canoe, tasting delectable natural New Zealand cheeses, or enjoying the sophistication of world class theatre.

Striking Taranaki

The region of Taranaki is dominated by the striking volcano cone of Mount Taranaki. The classic purple scoria cone provides a startling contrast to the greener than green dairy pastures which stretch as far as the eye can see from the mountain. Encircling the lower slopes of the mountain, the vivid ancient forest of Egmont National Park is alive with the sound of birds both native and introduced. In the winter, skiers flock to Taranaki's pristine snow-covered slopes while, in summer, walkers and trampers can take advantage of spectacular walking trails, including one right around the mountain.

New Plymouth is the main centre of Taranaki and well known for its beautiful parks, excellent Govett-Brewster Art Gallery, and the dazzling arrays of rhododendrons and azaleas found at the Puketū Rhododendron Trust.

A Mystical Unspoilt Environment

Wanganui sits near the mouth of New Zealand's longest navigable river. Once a major waterway and coastal port, the Wanganui River remains one of the city's greatest assets and gives access to the magical environment of the Whanganui National Park. The river is steeped in both Maori and pioneer history, and you can explore it at a variety of paces; by car, jet boat, guided canoe trip, white water raft or paddleboat. In the park foot trails take you away from it all to experience a paradise of unspoilt native bush.

Inland from Wanganui, Palmerston North is a flourishing agricultural city and a good place to arrange a farm visit.

Write on for Canada Day

TERRACE — Food, music and flags are among the themes to highlight Canada Day here July 1.

Being planned is a pancake breakfast in the morning to be hosted by the Kinsmen and Kinettes and a bonfire and hotdogs at night courtesy of local Rotarians.

In between there'll be a flag raising ceremony at city hall and music in Lower Little Park, says Canada Day

Mill plan in high gear

ries it might be cancelled, NDP Skeena MLA Helmut Giesbrecht said it was necessary.

"You know what happens when native groups feel we haven't met fiduciary responsibility... they go to court. They tie something up for awhile. I mean the courts tie something up for awhile. That's the reality," said Giesbrecht.

On top of the required terms and conditions, Orenda can now begin negotiating for the purchase of the mill site from the provincial government.

The company is also working this week on nailing down financing for the project. It earlier said investors were shying away because of the time it took for the province to make a decision.

Terrace mayor Jack Talstra said he was pleased that approval in principle was granted because it'll add to the economic mix of the area.

"We were concerned all along that the province might not move quick enough," he said.

This is the second site Orenda played in the park on Canada Day, she added.

The chamber of commerce mailing address for the essay entries is 3250 Eby and the postal code is V8G 5H4.

The next Canada Day committee meeting is May 13 at city hall beginning at 7:30 p.m.

People with ideas are welcome. Graydon can be contacted at 635-5518 after 5 p.m.

chose when it first proposed the project four years ago. The first site, south of Mezidian Lake, was abandoned by the company last year after problems arose with the location.

Orenda's Foster said the company was "very close" to moving out of the province in the weeks leading up to the approval in principle decision.

"We made (the B.C. government) aware there was competitive activity and about our concerns about moving this project forward," said Foster.

ROYAL CANADIAN Legion Branch 13 members Curley Casey, Linda Hudson, John Hill and Keith Norman pay tribute to the country's soldiers who gave their lives in the Battle of Vimy Ridge. Last Thursday was the 75th anniversary of the historic First World War battle in which Canadian forces took heavy losses to capture a key German defence point. The occasion was marked with a short ceremony and wreath-laying at the cenotaph.

HONOURING the memory of Canada's soldiers at Vimy, local residents Howard Cromarty and Elizabeth Evans lay a wreath at the cenotaph at city hall last week.

Vimy Ridge

A salute to history

In the bright sunshine of last Thursday afternoon a small procession of local veterans and Legion members paid silent tribute to the country's soldiers who gave their lives in the muck and horror of 1917 France — at a place called Vimy Ridge.

The battle — fought 75 years ago last week — was Canada's first and most important wartime victory as a single nation.

Elizabeth Evans, who along with Howard Cromarty laid the memorial wreath at the cenotaph, says her brother — Private William James — was one of the 3,598 Canadians killed in the fighting at Vimy.

"I can still remember the night before he left for overseas," she said. "He was 19 years old."

Her family was living in the Manitoba village of St. Amelie, north of Winnipeg. Her brother was in the 16th Canadian Scottish. "He was in the front lines at Vimy," she added.

Howard Cromarty's father was one of the Canadians who helped capture the heavily defended German position on the Ridge.

Sam Cromarty was with the 47th battalion out of Chilliwack, where he signed up with the forces.

"He was over the top at Vimy Ridge," Howard says. "He went all the way."

The elder Cromarty fought through all four bloody years of war. He was sidelined twice — once when his kneecap was blown off by a bomb, and again when he was too shell-shocked to hold a gun.

Cromarty, whose father died 20 years ago, says there are few surviving veterans of the First World War alive today.

"They say for every year of the war you lose five years of your life — because of the tension and pressure," he said.

"People think they have tension and pressure today. But when you have to stand in the trenches on your fingertips and the tops of your toes all day, you get a better understanding of what pressure is."

Trench fighters could never relax, he said.

"It was because of the shelling," he explained. "If you relaxed and put your hands down and let the shock take over, your eyes, your nose bleeds — and then they pack you out."

Vimy Ridge is remembered as the first time a large Canadian force fought together as a unit. After several failed British and French attempts to capture the stronghold — a cornerstone of the German defence lines — four Canadian divisions totalling about 100,000 men were thrown at Vimy.

The French had suffered 150,000 casualties in three attacks on the ridge. Honeycombed with tunnels, pillboxes, dugouts and machine gun nests, and wrapped with barbed wire, it ridge was considered to be nearly impregnable.

The Canadians used listening posts to pinpoint enemy muzzle flashes and then used precision artillery fire to destroy 80 per cent of the German artillery supporting the ridge.

Then, on April 9, 1917, about 20,000 Canadian soldiers scrambled up Vimy. After three days of intense fighting and 10,000 Canadian casualties, the Germans fled the high ground.

Finding your family roots
Mormans help out

Finding our family roots is a hobby for some, an obsession for others.

For Larry and Linda Sippel it's a matter of faith.

They're members of the rich of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — commonly referred to as Mormons — and mapping out family trees is an important part of the church's theology.

They believe entire families can be reunited in the afterlife if ancestral links can be established and ceremonies are performed on behalf of dead ancestors.

Now, family history research in Terrace has become a lot easier — for both Mormons and the public at large — with the opening of the church's family history library.

The library, run by Linda Sippel, is comprised of a computer with a compact disk ROM reader, and microfiche and microfilm readers.

More than 200 million names can be accessed on the system, and more records are available from the Mormon church's central family history library in Salt Lake City, Utah.

One local woman has used the church's computerized library to trace her bloodlines back to the 1300s.

"That's rare," says Linda, "but most people should generally be able to go back to the 1700s."

The first step in tracking your family history, she says, is to talk to as many of your oldest living relatives as quickly as possible.

Because of government restrictions on the release of information, many records that are less than a hundred years old can't be accessed.

People researching their family histories are often on their own for the first century. After that the church's computer and record system can come into play.

Usually, says Linda, that means getting as many details as possible — dates and places of births, weddings and deaths, as well as full names — of your parents and grandparents.

From there, it's a matter of searching the records for different countries — on compact disk and microfiche — for missing ancestors and filling in blanks.

How easy the process is generally depends on what country is being searched.

FINDING FAMILY ties is one of Linda Sippel's main goals as coordinator of the newly opened family history library at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"The British Isles has the most complete set of records for anywhere in the world," says Linda, pointing out the library's set of compact disks for Britain.

Russia, on the other hand, is a great blank space in the cabinet. Until this year the church wasn't permitted to copy records from the former Soviet Union, where many immigrants came to Canada from.

Most people have a keen interest in finding out where they came from, says Larry Sippel, branch president.

Others are scared by that idea. "You find out all kinds of strange things. And that makes some people a little bit paranoid," he said. "They think might find some swashbuckler or pirate in their history."

Sippel says the public is welcome to use the church's library — there's no charge. It's open from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday morning at the church at 1744 Kenworth St., just off Queensway Ave.

They'll hold an open house showcasing the new family history library on Tuesday, Apr. 21, from 7 to 9 p.m.

INDEPENDENTLY OWNED AND OPERATED

For the growing family

Four bedrooms puts this home in the growing family's realm. To expand on this concept there is a large private backyard which is fenced on three sides, with a family room in the basement, your growing family will be safe and comfortable kept warm by the natural gas fireplace.

Entertaining? No problem! With the large wet bar in the family room you can serve your guests and accommodate them with the other facilities in your basement. Like the fourth bedroom and the three piece bathroom. And while we are in the basement there is a shop for the Mr. Fix It of the family.

On those nice sunny afternoons sit out on the double sun decks or relax in the living room while your fireplace keeps away those evening chills.

Would you like to view this home or know more about it, call Ted at Century 21 or call 635-5619. You may also view this home on April 18 at the open house. MLS.

Country look enhances fam family home

By M. TYNAN

A raised entranceway adds a unique touch to the Country look achieved with the addition of Dutch gables and a covered front veranda. Inside, the family will enjoy a spacious and stylish floor layout.

Enter into a large foyer. To the left, french doors lead into a private living room. The family room is semi-private and provides ample space to arrange furnishings to your liking. A breakfast bar in the kitchen acts as a handy pass through to an elegant carousel dining area. The cook in the family will enjoy the gourmet style kitchen with plenty of cupboard and counter space, a work island, and a walk-in pantry. The freezer is right next door in a good sized utility room. A study, just inside the main entrance and set apart from the main traffic areas would make an ideal home office.

Upstairs, the games room could easily be converted into a fifth bedroom if necessary. The master is particularly impressive, featuring a walk-in closet, a five piece ensuite, and a private sitting area.

Plans for U-796 may be obtained for $595 for a package of five complete sets of working prints and $59.00 for each additional set of the same plan. Allow $12.00 extra to cover the cost of postage and handling (B.C. residents add applicable sales tax to plan total) (All Canadian residents add 7% GST to plan total plus postage and handling).

This is one of our new designs. Many innovative plans are now available in our NEW Two Storey plan catalogues for $13.85 including postage and handling and 7% GST.

Please make all cheques, money orders, and Visa or MasterCard authorization payable to: Terrace Standard Plan of the Week, 13659-108th Avenue, Surrey, B.C. V3T 2K4.

HOME PLAN

Long Railed Porches Add Victorian Charm

High roofs, a bay window in the livingroom, and sheltered-railed porches give this practical plan an old-time charm that's hard to resist. A roomy foyer greets guests and a large coat closet is close by. A large kitchen with an island provides plenty of workspace and the bay-windowed breakfast nook adds a homey touch. A mudroom/utility area is conveniently located just off the kitchen and incorporates a family entrance from the garage. The three huge bedrooms are well-endowed with closet space and there are two full bathrooms, one a part of the master suite. The main bedroom also opens out onto a well-protected balcony.

It's the Experience!

T'ai Chi Grand Master Ta Tchen Tchoung will be here Apr. 17-18 to instruct a workshop for local T'ai Chi enthusiasts.

T'ai Chi master to teach workshop

The country's top T'ai Chi instructor will be here to teach a workshop in the discipline Apr. 17th and 18th.

Grand Master Ta Tchen Tchoung, president of the Chinese T'ai Chi Chuan Association of Canada, has taught in Taiwan, South Africa, the U.S., and Vancouver.

Several of his students have gone on to teach in Canada, the U.S. and abroad. One of his students, Francis Tsen, will assist him at the workshop.

Another of his students — Peter Dickson — who gained teaching status in 1986, also instructs T'ai Chi in Terrace. He teaches five classes a week in Kitimat and Terrace.

The thousand-year-old Chinese art combines concentration and calmness of mind and breathing with slow, graceful movements to attain a relaxed state of both mind and body.

You don't have to be in good physical condition to begin learning T'ai Chi — people of all ages and fitness levels practice it. When used for self-defence, calmness of mind and flexibility of body can overcome even powerful attacks.

Anyone interested in the workshop or more information on T'ai Chi classes can contact Naida Stanton at 635-6724.

The story of Easter

Terrace Pentecostal Assembly is the scene this Easter Sunday of a dramatic production.

"Easter Comes Alive" has 17 characters and will be staged at 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.

"It presents the view of a person starting to look at what the Easter story is all about — it comes alive as he's reading it in the Bible," said pastor John Caplin.

Music in the form of a choir will complement the play.

Caplin said he wrote the production in one evening as a way of answering questions people have about Easter.

"I was thinking about what we would be doing for Easter and I wanted to do something different to remember what Easter means," he said.

• Today — April 15th — is the anniversary of the 1984 wind-storm that raged through the Terrace/Kitimat area causing millions of dollars worth of damage. Winds at the Terrace airport increased rapidly from 4 to 5 p.m., reaching a record peak sustained speed of 93 km/h with a record gust of 124 km/h at 5 p.m. The wind was caused by as small but intense low pressure system that developed in the Douglas Channel and raced up the valley to Terrace. The sudden storm sank boats and caused structural damage at the Kitimat marina, damaged several aircraft at the Terrace airport.

Terrace Bluebacks proved generous hosts for their Sprint into Spring meet, except when it came to the pool.

Led by the usual powerful swims of Aimee Peacock, Cory Holland, Tina Holland and Garth Coxford, the Bluebacks amassed 3494 points to take the meet.

Peacock left her opponents in her wake in all but two of her 14 swims, the 100m and 200m freestyle where she finished second.

Tina Holland picked up nine firsts and was also never out of the first two in her 15 races while brother Cory notched top three finishes in each of his efforts, racking up 11 wins and proving unbeatable over 50m and 100m.

Coxford also recorded 15 top three results including six wins. That performance was particularly impressive, coach Bill Nash pointed out, because he was also involved in a basketball tournament and the Music Festival that same weekend.

Showing why he and Coxford are becoming known as the club's latest dynamic duo, David Vanderlee kept up the momentum with two wins and five each seconds and thirds.

Nash also had high praise for the younger Bluebacks at the meet, particularly the 10 and under girls, the strongest group of that age he'd seen.

and thirds.

Nash also had high praise for the younger Bluebacks at the meet, particularly the 10 and under girls, the strongest group of that age he'd seen.

Leading the charge here was Marina Checkley, 10, with five wins and four seconds. Describing her as an amazing sprinter, he added, "She's someone to watch in that pair, Audrey Erb and Jennifer Vanderlee are now definitely the "new kids on the block".

Another up-and-comer is Chris Kerman, 10, who he suggests could be successor to Garth Coxford. Kerman picked up three wins and two thirds while failing only once to reach the final six.

Doug McKenzie in senior boys and Tori McKenzie, Denise Vanderlee and Tammy Clarabutt in senior girls also picked up their fair share of events, but Nash highlighted the "considerable character and leadership" they had shown.

Apart from competing in their own events, he pointed out Vanderlee and Clarabutt were instructors with the club and therefore also had coaching duties to carry out during the meet.

As well as the individual successes, the Bluebacks added four wins, three seconds and a third in team relay events.

Kitimat Marlins (1877 pts.) edged Prince Rupert Marlins (1846) for second spot with Masset Eagles and the newly formed Bulkley Valley Otters filling out the remaining places.

Terrace bowlers underlined their reputation as one of the most dominant alleys in the north at the Northwest Open in Mackenzie April 3-5.

And, once again, it was the ladies who struck hardest.

Diane Francis, Sherry Lopushinsky, Cecile Boehm, Darlene Frank, Diane Campbell and Lori Roberts combined to defend Terrace's title and take the gold in the ladies team event.

In doing so, they also bowled the highest team score of any event over the weekend — 1340. Sherry Lopushinsky (371) and Diane Francis (363) also bowled high singles scores.

Lopushinsky went on to add another gold to her collection in the ladies singles, Diane Francis made it a local one-two with the silver and defending champ Boehm settled for fourth this time.

Lopushinsky, Francis, Boehm and Monica Peacock also filled out four of the five places on the ladies all-star team, Hannah Wilson of Prince George taking the remaining spot.

Local bowlers also made the finals in both the men's and mixed events but had to be satisfied with the runner-up spot. Men's silver medalists were Greg Saunders, Leif Thomson, Randy Durand, Glen Brink, Don Collison and John Rasmussen coached by Roy Campbell.

Campbell was joined by Sherry Lopushinsky in coaching the mixed team of Dave Wiebe, Monica Peacock, Dennis Ward, Marlene Thornton, Jim Duffy and Debbie Middleton.

Terrace Bowling Lanes also took the aggregate title for the third consecutive year.

Seniority asserted

Ten local bowlers are counting down to May 9, the date for the zone finals and a shot at representing the northwest in the B.C. Senior Games.

Topping the 21 bowlers who took part in the March 28 Terrace playoffs was Allan Dubeau who turned in a 625 total for the three game series.

With placings being decided on the basis of pins over — the amount by which a player's score exceeded their average — Dubeau's plus 157 left him well clear of his opponents.

Also lifting their game when it counted were Norma Lefrancois (569-plus 98), Don Sharpe (675-plus 87), Ida McCann (426-plus 60) and Florence Schulmeister (438-plus 57) to fill out the remainder of Terrace's first team.

The city's second entry at the zones will be made up of Fred Gagnon (603-plus 51), Bill Ross (582-plus 51), Dolly Roberts (551-plus 44), Joe Schulmeister (553-plus 40) and Paul Lefrancois (649-plus 37).

The Terrace Lanes are hosts to this year's zones which get under way at 1 p.m., Sunday, May 9.

Kitwanga defend undercover title

Kitwanga will be back in Terrace this weekend to defend its Provincial Indoor Soccer Cup.

KFC won last year's inaugural event and are one of eight teams who will be vying for the title this time.

Organizer Joe Duben said they will be up against their hometown rivals the Kitwanga Rangers and challengers from Port Edward, Kitimat, Greenville, Skeena Crossing, Smithers and Terrace.

The tournament will get under way this Friday, April 17 beginning at approximately 4 p.m. and will continue through the holiday weekend with the semi-finals and finals taking place Monday morning.

All games are being played in the Thornhill Jr. Secondary school gym. Teams are limited to 10 players, including the goalie.

When the teams take to the floor, there will be more at stake than just pride. With an entry fee of $400 and all that being returned in prizes, Duben points out a total of $3,200 will be on the line.

There will also be trophies for the top teams, most valuable player, all star team members and the top goalie and scorer.

*****

Although only held in Terrace, Duben is determined the Indoor Provincial Cup will one day live up to its name.

When the idea was originally floated with the provincial soccer body, it was welcomed. However, B.C. Soccer subsequently had to drop out.

As a result, the event remains a primarily northwestern one for the moment.

However, Duben is determined to keep the province-wide concept alive. He says he will be seeking sponsorship from major corporations next year as a first, and vital step to expanding the competition.

Joey Losier best in the nation

Joey Losier returned home Monday a Canadian champion.

One of five B.C. boxers at last week's National Junior boxing championships in Sarnia, Ont., Losier, 15, continued the devastating form which has made him invincible in this province lately.

In his first two 132lb. class bouts, Losier sent his Newfoundland and Alberta opponents crashing to the canvas in the second round for the ten count.

That set up the Sunday morning gold medal bout against Carl Brassard of Quebec. Although unable to come up with another knockout, Losier completely dominated the fight shutting Brassard out 15-0 on the computer point scoring system used at the championships.

For Losier the result was sweet reversal of his '91 experience when he came out on the wrong end of a split decision and had to settle for silver.

Not surprisingly, the word from Terrace and B.C. coach Jeff Dille is "He's just flying."

Also in the medals was Terrace Boxing Club member Darren Bell. Fighting at 156lbs., Bell lost his first fight to defending champion Brad Smith of Alberta but came away with his second consecutive nationals bronze. Smith went on to win the gold again.

Overall, the B.C. team came away with three titles — the highest percentage of golds of any team at the event — and two bronze.

Wally Valdez of Burnaby edged defending champion Jonathon Yellow Knees of Alberta by a single point to win the 139lbs. class, Matt O'Brien of Cranbrook also picked up gold and Tom White of Cranbrook took bronze after losing his first fight to Albertan defending champion Jason Smith.

Give an inch, take the consequences

"What's that awful smell, Dad?" asked the boy.

The man squinted into the smog-filled distance and pulled down the sun visor. "It's from the mills at the end of the valley, Bill," the man answered in the slightly irritated and exhausted voice parents get when they have answered too many questions. "If it bothers you, roll up your window."

The boy pulled back the lever. The window glided smoothly up its tracks sealing out the hum of the rubber against the road.

They passed over and through the orange bridge. The boy looked down at the river. Some tires lay partly on the beach and partly in the water. A car was parked in the lot next to the river. Garbage from a dumpster someone had knocked over littered the pavement. A group of adolescents was draped over the old car like lizards basking on a large, grey rock.

"Hey look, Dad," shouted the boy, "there's a 1992 Ford Taurus."

The man, who had drifted off into a thicket of bitter half-formed thoughts that grew from trouble finding a job and the increasingly troubled marriage, started and returned to the present in time to see the smooth contours of the vintage car as they passed by.

"Yeah, that's a Taurus alright. It was a fine car, a fine car," the man said wistfully. "They don't make them like that anymore."

They rolled past the series of warehouses, the buildings all white, all with rust coloured roofs. The boy peered down the alley way between each one. It looked as if they had no end.

"You had a Taurus once, didn't you Dad?"

"Huh, oh yeah. Your Grandad bought it for me when I graduated. It was a real beauty: blue and shiny and fast." The man chuckled, pushed a little harder on the accelerator, then continued. "We didn't treat it very well, though. Back in those days there were unpaved roads, in fact most of the roads were unpaved. We rodded around town in the Taurus, we went on fishing trips in her — we took her places she wasn't meant to go.

"Fishing?" asked the boy.

"Oh yeah, we used to catch fish in all the rivers around here." They passed the abandoned steel mill and began climbing the hill leading to the turn-off to the copper smelter.

The boy looked at the towering pyramid of nondescript industrial waste. The man could feel another question forming. He waited for it to surface and burst into the air like a bubble in a water cooler. It did.

"Did you catch fish here, in this river?"

"In the Kitimat? You bet we did. We caught steelhead in the spring, trout and coho ..."

"Coho?"

"Yeah, coho. A smaller salmon than the great big chinook we caught here in the summer."

The boy looked at the river, brown on the edges and barren. "What about now? Are there any fish now?"

The man shook his head. "No, not now," he said sadly. They passed by the acid factory, then another asphalt desert.

"What happened to them," asked the boy.

"Well," said the man, "we used to cut trees around here, son. The we ran out of trees — at least enough trees to provide jobs for the people living here. Someone said we needed a mill to provide jobs and they built it up the road, near the small lake we passed a while back."

"And that mill killed the fish,"

the boy interjected.

"No, no," he said. "The mill was pretty clean as pulp mills go, but once the site was built and some new roads were cut, it became easier and more appealing for other industries to build in the corridor between here and Terrace. And, with the help of people who like malls and parking lots and making lots of money quick, they did."

"So what happened to the fish?"

"Well, son," said the man, "Fish don't get along with development very well. And soon after the fish disappeared, so did the bears and the moose and the eagles and all the other creatures we used to see around here."

"Gee, bears." The boy tried to picture the large, furry animals lumbering between the deserted buildings.

"Couldn't they have put the factories somewhere else so we could still have the bears, Dad?"

"Good question, Bill," said the man. "Good question."

SPORT SCOPE

LA invite for Aces

It's a long way from Greenville to Los Angeles, but that's where Yvonne Campbell and Carol Stephens are tonight.

The duo are playing with the Port Alberni Renegades ladies' basketball team in a ladies national tournament there.

Both are members of the Greenville Aces team which recently finished runner-up to Port Alberni in the B.C. championship. Having seen Campbell's and Stephens' fine three-point shooting and excellent rebound work, Port Alberni was quick to invite them to join the team on its Californian trip.

The Renegades played their first game of the week-long, 26 team tournament last night.

Men's baseball change

Those interested in taking up Earla Peden's offer to start a 19-up men's baseball league here should note a change of date for the organizational meeting.

It will now take place Monday, April 20 in the library basement beginning at 7 p.m. Registration will take place at that time followed by a short meeting.

For more information, contact Peden at 635-5940.

Uplands take tourney

Led by six-point scoring performances by Lee Anne Critchley and Alane Pearce, Uplands took last week's Grade 7 Girls' basketball tournament decider by beating Cassie Hall 20-11.

Uplands and Cassie Hall both finished with unbeaten records in the March 27-28 round-robin, forcing the extra game. Six different players contributed to Cassie Hall's final game point total.

Tour path to Summer Games

Like cyclists elsewhere in the province, northwestern riders have their sights set on the B.C. Summer Games and its three days of cycling events.

But to get there, they'll first have to compete in the Tour de Smithers. The Tour is this year's qualifying race for Zone 7 with 14 expenses-paid trips to Port Alberni up for grabs.

It gets under way 9 a.m. Saturday, May 9 with a three to six lap road race around Tyhee Lake which will include a recreation class — new this year. Later that day there will also be a 16km individual time trial at Tatlow Road.

Sunday's final event will be a closed course criterium in downtown Smithers.

Apart from those vying for Games spots, Zone 7 coach Chris Desjardins also expects racers from Prince George, the Lower Mainland and Ketchikan, Alaska to take part. That'll make for intense competition, he says.

For more information about the Tour call Peter Krause at 847-5009 during the day, 847-9780 evenings. Chris Desjardins (847-9314) is the contact for information on the Summer Games. Both can also be reached through the Smithers Cycle Club, Box 4016, Smithers V0J 2N0.

DEPRESSING for Houston fans perhaps, but the home crowd loved the sight of Terrace Juveniles breaking in over the visitors' blue line. And the longer the game went on, the more frequent the sight became as the Juveniles took command in the midget tournament final.

Juveniles take gold

The Terrace Juveniles ended their season on a high note, taking top spot in the Midget hockey tournament held here April 3-5.

Facing Houston in the final of the four-team tourney, the Juveniles gave up the first goal but that was to be the only time the visitors would see the light go on for them.

Coupling heavy, and occasionally spectacular checks, with some crisp passing and fast breaks, the Juveniles broke through the Houston defences three times in the second.

Shutting down their opponents again in the third, the Juveniles added one more with just over five minutes left in the final frame to take the gold 4-1.

The result was a turnaround of the two team's meeting during round robin play when Houston had skated to a 6-4 triumph. A 13-2 shelling of Smithers and 4-3 squeaker over Terrace Totem

Ford saw Houston enter the final undefeated.

The Juveniles finished 2-1 in round robin, just getting by Totem Ford 6-5 but easily handling Smithers 7-3.

Totem Ford knocked off Smithers 7-4 in the bronze medal game.

Juvenile defenceman Dennis Bannister and forward Doug Worsfold were named to the all-star team as was Totem Ford forward Chris Wilkinson.

Just wait for next year

They may have come without a medal, but the local ringette teams which took part in the recent 'C' provincial finals may have brought back something more valuable — experience.

And that, says Sharon Prinz, is going to make Terrace a force to be reckoned with at next year's event.

She said the Petites (11-under) discovered a lack of match experience and an age disadvantage worked against them as they went 0-4 at the Quesnel championship. Compared to their provincials opponents, she explained, "We don't get enough games up here."

However, Prinz emphasized, the team was not bowed by the experience. Suggesting the experience had been a valuable one, she predicted, "With another year under our belt we will be very competitive."

On the Tweens (16-under) side, the Terrace team knocked off Prince George but dropped the other four match-ups. However, Prinz said each of those games had been hard fought and the final scores were "very close".

A mark of how well the team had performed came with the naming of Lisa Smith, Christine Zaporzan and Kelly Prinz to an all-star team which played an exhibition game against Chetwynd. The all-stars won, she added.

With the season now over, Prinz said ringette is looking forward to increased membership next season — and the '93 provincials.

Start your engines

Contributed

It's that time of year again, folks.

While drivers are busy building, rebuilding and painting those stock cars, others are working to replace seats, paint and generally get the track ready for another racing season.

The start-up dance will take place Apr. 25 in the Thornhill Community Centre. Big Bark and the Howlers will entertain and a midnight lunch will be served.

The club also plans to hold a lip-sync contest that night. All you need is a costume and a tape but you must pre-register. Cash prizes will be awarded for the top three performers. Contact Marg Cooper before Apr. 24 at 638-0609 after 4 p.m.

Everyone is invited to come out and share the fun. Tickets are available at Central Gifts, Cedarland Tire, Workwear World and Off Road Specialties.

Our Skeena Mall show will take place May 1-2 with approximately eight cars on show and their drivers there to answer questions. Two of the vehicles will also be in the mall June 20 to advertise a draw which is taking place.

The final clean-up to wash down the track and complete last minute chores takes place April 26 — that's right, the day of the dance — beginning at 1 p.m.

And the 1992 season will officially get under way May 10, Mothers Day, when several of the cars will be racing for the first time.

Finally, a reminder to members in Terrace, Prince Rupert, Kitimat and the Hazeltons, our meetings are held the second Thursday of each month at the Kin Hut on Kalum St at 8 p.m.

Think Safe Play Safe Be Safe!

The CN Railway Safety Student Awareness Team thanks the students and teachers in the Terrace Elementary Schools for their enthusiastic response to our railway safety program.

We appreciate the many colourful drawings and letters of thanks and hope that our message — Think Safe, Play Safe, Be Safe — will help to keep us all safe from railway accidents.

"My class of five years olds attended for 30 minutes and they were captivated by the program. All components of the session were geared to their level and the men addressed them well without talking down to them."

I learned that you shouldn't run a cross train.

"My class and I really enjoyed having Mr. Harkins and Mr. Hall speak to us. They kept the children interested. They made them feel important and had very good control."

I learned that you shouldn't play on the train tracks.

"Even at the Grade 7 level your talk was effective in getting the message across. The reason? Not too much talk and one GREAT (sobering and age-relevant) video! Good work!"
